Public exhibition attracts hundreds! The exhibition concerning the future of Woodford airfield, which was organised by BAe and which featured sessions in Woodford, Poynton and Bramhall, has now come to an end. Attendances at these sessions was surprisingly high, with over 1000 people attending in all. The exhibition gave information concerning the history of the airfield, and of the communities surrounding the airfield. It also painted a number of scenarios as to how the airfield might be developed in the future, with varying mixes of different types of housing and commerce, at varying densities. Attendees were also asked to complete a questionnaire so that public preferences could be fed back into the planning process. If you missed the exhibition, the good news is that you can still study all the relevant information at www.futurewoodford.co.uk. If necessary, the information displayed by BAe on their exhibition stands may be downloaded here. More importantly perhaps, after studying the relevant information you can make your views known by completing a brief form at <http://www.futurewoodford.co.uk/questionnaire>
